Epistle

I. Meditation and Speculation in Form

A Paulinian man is meditating and speculating – he is walking on a road, or street, and taking a turn to return home, he has planned the years, a thousand at a time, which determines Eternity as lived species of experience, which then is all planned in science and even theologically true.

II. Speculation as Speaking

What is the weight of things?

What is the infinite in simple life?

III. Think of a Novel – and speak don’t sing

In the 1971, a man had a car, first buy that, it is a simple infinite – the car teaches you how to drive, and driving is learning about wealth to buy some market stuff, and then one buys that stuff.

By this I mean something divine – that buying stuff has been cleared off the list of things to do – I now just count the years – I am infinite, I know by this simple thing.

Other such things.
